

I am a physics major, a kick boxer, the CEO of my own startup and an advocate for Israel, thanks to advocacy training by the Federation's Jewish Community Relations Council. I'm concerned about the heavy anti-Israel sentiment on many college campuses. The JCRC helps teens like me learn to speak up for Israel before we even step foot on a college campus. I've developed the skills and knowledge to have fact-based discussions about Israel. Now I can help educate people who don't know a lot and help people who don't care about supporting Israel become more passionate.
